CHUM CHUM

CREATED BY ERIC ROBLES

FANBOY

FANBOY OR FANBOI IS A TERM USED TO DESCRIBE AN INDIVIDUAL (USUALLY MALE, THOUGH THE FEMININE VERSION FANGIRL MAY BE USED FOR FEMALES) WHO IS UTTERLY DEVOTED TO A SINGLE FANNISH SUBJECT, OR TO A SINGLE POINT OF VIEW WITHIN THAT SUBJECT, OFTEN TO THE POINT WHERE IT IS CONSIDERED AN OBSESSION. FANBOYS REMAIN LOYAL TO THEIR PARTICULAR OBSESSION, DISREGARDING ANY FACTORS THAT DIFFER FROM THEIR POINT OF VIEW. THEY ARE ALSO TYPICALLY AGAINST THE OPPOSING BRAND OR COMPETITION OF THEIR OBSESSION.

WHO ? WHAT ?

WHEN ?

WHERE ?

IN NO PARTICULAR ORDER

WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT ?

Fanboy is a series about two kids named Fanboy and Chum Chum who patrol their neighborhood in an ever-vigilant crusade against the forces of whatever they find next! Always eager to help, and filled with good intentions, they usually end up annoying the residents of Pookie Dookie Street with their harebrained ideas and theories. Fanboy and Chum Chum are those neighborhood kids that you just know are going to do the most dimwitted thing possible in every situation they find. I mean these guys get excited about things like the cloning power of silly putty!

Hyper-optimistic and just plain hyper, Fanboy and Chum Chum don't know the meaning of the word "failure." This never-say-die attitude has been instilled in them by their idol, a fictional TV superhero named Fanman. And just how serious are Fanboy and Chum Chum about following in the footsteps of their idol? Let's put it this way...they have their own theme music.

Although it may look like Fanboy and Chum Chum are on a vital mission, they're usually sidetracked in their superhero adventures by some mind-numbing mystery. Like, can too much sour candy cause you to have a stupid-looking face forever? Or Earth-shattering questions like, will drinking too much Frosty Freezy Freeze cause your brain to freeze or will it give you the ability to have super freeze breath instead? Worry not! Our two unlikely heroes are just the spazzed-out kids to uncover the answers to such eternal questions that have plagued mankind for untold minutes!

FANBOY

Bing! Bang! Pow! Zok! Those are the words that best describe our off-the-wall 11-year-old hero. This high-energy, fun-loving, optimistic kid is always ready for action as he seeks out evil in every nook and cranny of Pookie Dookie Street. And what powers does he have to aid him in this never-ending quest? Super strength? Flight? X-ray vision? No! All he's got is a wild imagination, creeping Spandex and a snug pair of tight whiteys. With these awesome powers of non-superpowerness, he's on a mission to serve and protect the citizens of Pookie Dookie Street from the villainy of the universe!

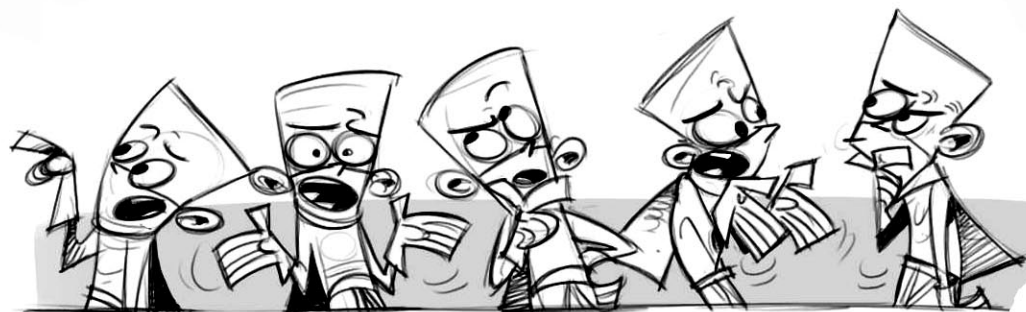

"Yes! And if you follow the way of Fanman, you too can one day become a Fanman... LIKE ME!" From the moment Fanboy heard those very words spoken by the TV superhero, Fanman, he knew his destiny. Since that fateful day, Fanboy has developed a very abnormal obsession for his idol. He patrols the neighborhood with a cocky sense of pride, having not the slightest doubt that if it wasn't for his efforts, his block, and soon after the very planet, would be doomed!

No drama is too dramatic and every moment is more crucial than the next in Fanboy's world, but all urgency will quickly disappear as he geeks-out on some pointless distraction. Often one to cause more trouble than he finds, Fanboy can easily become highly annoying. How so? Fanboy is just one of those kids who can't stop asking questions. He's always in the middle of everyone else's business! It's not his fault, though; he's just a real curious kid who never stops talking. In fact, it's been documented that when his class was given an assignment to speak on their heroes, other kids gave two-to-three minute speeches on guys like George Washington. But not Fanboy. Nooooo. He spoke for 48 straight hours on "Everything There is to Know About Fanman." Although he did allow two bathroom breaks.

Is it scary that a kid can be so into a fictional character? Well, yes! And that's where the name "Fanboy" originates. "The Oz," owner of the local comic shop and guru of all things sci-fi, christened him with the name Fanboy after being subjected to the "Top-10,000 reasons Fanman is so Totally Awesomtacular!" Given the title, Fanboy knew that with great fanness comes great responsibility and he couldn't do it on his own! So, after two packs of Ice Monster Bun Buns and a Frosty Freezy Freeze, he convinced his bestest chum in the whole wide world to become his loyal sidekick. Known to all only as Chum Chum, he and Fanboy are ever-watchful for the forces of evil in their all-too-ordinary neighborhood. From an old lady's congested cough to a kid's flat tire, Fanboy knows that it must have been the work of a villainous conspiracy of neighborhood conquest. "Curse you deviant villains!"

CHUM CHUM

Not just a pal or a friend, but a chum. A Chum Chum. Yes! It's Fanboy's most trusted companion, Chum Chum. This lovable, waddling 10-year-old has been Fanboy's best friend and neighbor since the day he was brought home from the hospital. Unlike Fanboy, whose entire existence revolves around all things Fanman, Chum Chum is a little fuzzy on the whole process. Chum Chum realized long ago that he doesn't have a popsicle's chance on the sun of understanding all the superhero mumbo jumbo that comes out of Fanboy's mouth. But he's figured out that if he nods his head a lot, that tends to make Fanboy happy.

If Fanboy has a manic focus, then Chum Chum has an equally manic lack of focus. The easily-confused lad can lead Fanboy astray. Like, if Fanboy notices a new mailman on the block and says, "Chum Chum! Look there! That mailman doesn't look familiar!" Then Chum Chum, not totally understanding superhero talk would reply, "Sweet bun buns, Fanboy! You're right! He looks mean and villainous and stuff. Like a villainous mailman that would rid the world of banana-covered pancakes and stuff... forever!" Then there would be a long pause as Fanboy tries to register what Chum Chum said, since Fanboy doesn't totally speak Chum Chum. Then Fanboy would declare, "You're right Chum Chum! He does look like the type of villainous mailman that would rid the world of banana-covered pancakes and stuff...forever! Lets get'em!" Then they'd run off into action, only Chum Chum isn't always as ready for action as Fanboy Chum Chum's usually spaced-out, thinking of the most bizarre things like, "How do they stuff the cream filling in an Ice Monster Bun Bun?" He's also easily distracted by shiny objects. This frustrates Fanboy and drives him crazy. It also drives him up the wall when Chum Chum would rather watch an episode of a preschool show called "Count Choc-O-Choc" instead of a perfectly awesome episode of Fanman. Don't get me wrong, Chum Chum loves Fanman just as much as the next kid, but just not as much as "The Fanboy" himself.

This is what makes Chum Chum special. He's not just one of those mindless sidekicks that will make life easier for the hero. NO! Instead you could say he's a mindless sidekick that challenges Fanboy to become the best hero he could be. Chum Chum truly loves his best friend and thinks Fanboy is the coolest, funniest, most exciting kid on the block.

So, on that fateful day when Fanboy asked Chum Chum if he would take a palm spit vow to become his loyal sidekick forever, Chum Chum didn't hesitate to say, "Yes!" Well...maybe he did hesitate until Fanboy bribed him with two packs of Ice Monster Bun Buns and a Frosty Freezy Freeze.

FANBOY FAMILY

Nobody knows the family's real name. They're just known as Mr. and Mrs. Fanboy because of their adorable son. To learn their real name would require someone actually asking them and risk a one-on-one encounter with Fanboy himself. No one on Pookie Dookie Street is brave, or foolish enough, for that, so Mr. and Mrs. Fanboy will have to do.

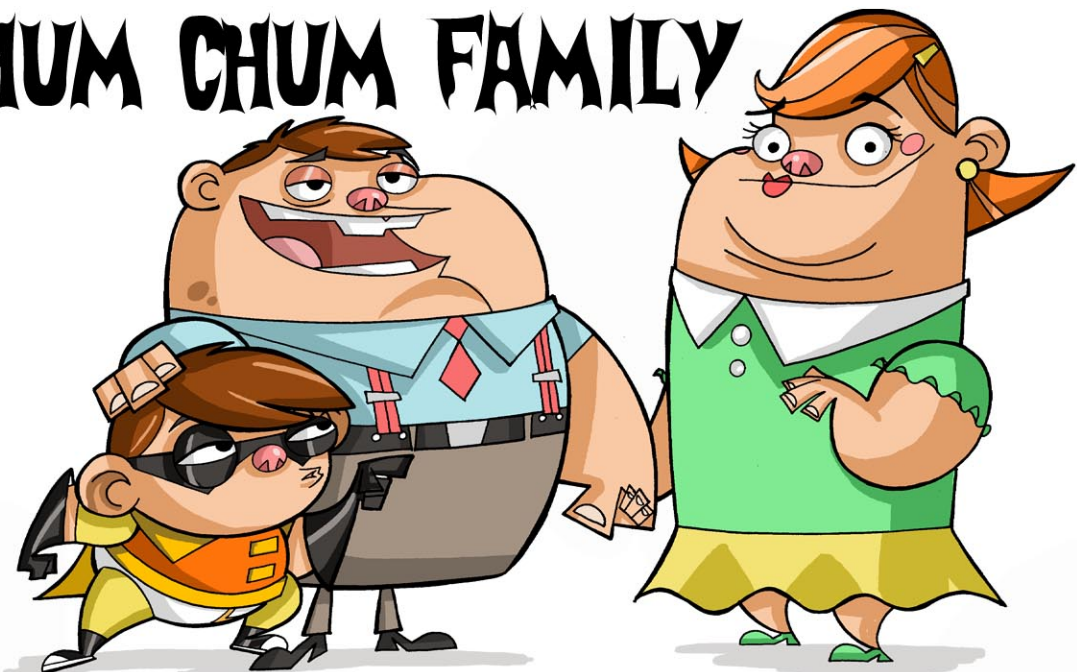

Like many modern families, Fanboy's parents are at work all day and slightly pre-occupied once they get home. So, they usually leave their oldest son, Lenny, in charge. Lenny is a seventeen-year-old with no patience for his annoying little brother. He considers himself ruler of the house when his parents are out and makes Fanboy call him "Lenny the Almighty." Fanboy refuses to call him this, for as Fanboy likes to put it, "You're not the boss of me, you simple mortal!" Like all older brothers, Lenny likes to taunt Fanboy and Chum Chum, teasing them about their superhero role-playing. It doesn't phase them a bit and actually gives them incentive to mess with Lenny even more.

Lenny is a video game nut and has been playing the Invaders arcade game at the Super Mart since he was four. He holds the highest score in history and has only been close to losing the title once courtesy of a Takamoto Usi from Japan. Unfortunately for Takamoto, the Super Mart had a mysterious, and to this day unexplained, blackout, wiping out Takamoto's game in mid-threat. But I have a feeling it won't be the last we hear of Takamoto.

Since Lenny was always at the Super Mart playing the game, he ended up getting a part-time job there. Even though he doesn't show it, he loves his job. He takes pride in the pristine look of the store that houses the coolest game ever created. Yeah, things would be perfect if it wasn't for his little brother and friend hanging out there all the time, messing around. The worst thing is, he can't kick them out because Fanboy would probably tell on his brother if he did. Dangit!

CHUM CHUM FAMILY

Chum Chum lives with his Father and stepmother. Chum Chum's father is a gadget tester at a nearby factory. Spend about ten seconds talking to him and you'll understand where Chum Chum got his spacey personality. Chum Chum's stepmother is a space alien. Okay, so, that's what Chum Chum is always claiming. He swears that he once saw a spaceship dropping off the laundry and she happened to be dropped off with it. Of course Fanboy believes every word. Too bad Chum Chum imagined it...or did he?

The Normal Family (AKA THE EVIL SCALE FAMILY)

Mr. Normal desperately tried to get more acting gigs, but couldn't shake off the cowl of The Evil Scale. No one would take him seriously! As a result, he spent decades trying to distance himself from the role. The culmination of that dream came the day he purchased the Scaly Fish Taco restaurant on Pookie Dookie Street. Things couldn't have been going better; his past as a failed actor were finally behind him.

Then he met Fanboy.

At first he vehemently denied Fanboy's accusations, but after endless prodding, poking and prying by Fanboy, Mr. Normal finally snapped and admitted his true identity: he was the former actor known as The Evil Scale. But embracing his past ended up being a good thing. He now uses his one-time marginal fame to sell tacos. Changing the name to The Evil Scales Fish Tacos, business has never been better. Now if he could only get those two pesky little kids in Spandex to leave him alone

The Normals were your average family that just moved into the neighborhood... until the day two neighboring kids rang the doorbell. It turns out that Mr. Normal wasn't so normal after all. You see, he had a deep, dark secret that he had been hiding from his children for years. Yes! He was the actor to played the "The Evil Scale," a villain on the live-action Fanman TV series back in the '80s. He was dropped from the show after only three episodes because the actor who played Fanman felt that the Evil Scale character was too contrived and not real enough for him, explaining only that, "Fish aren't evil."

Kyle is The Evil Scale's 11-year-old bratty son. Kyle was looking forward to moving to Pookie Dookie Street, especially after he made friends with two neighborhood kids - who, as fate would have it, were Fanboy and Chum Chum. Kyle loved comic books, video games and Frosty Freezy Freezes. How could he NOT love Fanboy and Chum Chum!? It seemed a "Best Friends Forever" bond was about to be shared, when Kyle revealed he liked the villains in the "Fanman" comic book more than Fanman. That should've been Fanboy's first clue. When the true identity of Kyle's dad was revealed, Kyle chose his ex-actor-TV-villain father instead of the über do-gooder Fanboy. Besides Kyle was given his very own Scale Boy outfit - with matching fins. Fanboy never had a chance. On that fateful day, the line of good and evil was drawn on Pookie Dookie Street and Kyle became Fanboy's mortal 11-year-old enemy as he took his rightful place alongside his father at the Evil Scale Fish Taco restaurant. Together, they scheme to dominate the world one franchise at a time.

Jenna is Kyle's thirteen-year-old sister. Like all girls around her age, she thinks that her family is totally embarrassing. But in her case, it's true. I mean, her father and brother like to dress up in super villain costumes and sell tacos! Much to Kyle's dismay, Jenna gets along with Fanboy and Chum Chum. This usually leads to sibling rivalry between Kyle and Jenna as she "frats with the enemy," as Kyle likes to put it. Jenna is one of the few people, or make that very few people, who actually likes Fanboy. She helps him and Chum Chum by telling them about Kyle's "stupid little plans" (If it annoys her bratty brother she's game!) as he deviously plots away in his Scale Lair. Fanboy and Chum Chum have a bit of a crush on Jenna, causing them to act like competitive boobs when she's around, but Jenna has eyes for just one hunk on the block: Fanboy's older brother Lenny.

BERRY "THE MIGHTY ICE MONSTER"

What happens when you mix the forbidden combination of Frosty Ice Monster Bun Buns and Frosty Freeze Freeze? Well, if you're foolish enough to do that, you get Berry the Ice Monster. Berry is more commonly known as a fictional character from the Fanman comic books, but on one very freakish afternoon, Fanboy and Chum Chum brought Berry to life through the dangerous murgence of said ingredients. The only problem was that Berry's transformation was never completed, leaving him legless and thereby preventing him from embarking on his sole mission to create chaos throughout the world. Instead, he's stuck in Fanboy and Chum Chum's Fan Lair as a sort of pet - which is a big step down from "world conqueror."

Of course, Berry is furious that he's been brought back to life with no legs and is stuck with these two knuckleheads until he can get a sip of some Frosty Freezy Freeze to complete the job. Fanboy and Chum Chum usually frustrate him to the point of meltdown, which is no problem for the boys because they just keep bringing him back to life with another Frosty Freezy Freeze. When they do, it's always some dramatic revival for Berry, filled with vows of destruction and crushing things. Then he realizes he's back with Fanboy and Chum Chum with no legs. As much as he complains and swears that he will one day destroy them, he's sort of grown fond of these two guys and sometimes becomes very parental, making sure their capes are on right or their shoes are tied before they leave the lair. "Put your jackets on! It's cold out there!" He'll yell after them concerned, then add, "And when you two get back I WILL DESTROY YOU!"

THE "OZ"

If the geeks had a king, it would be thirty-four-year-old Oswald Herman, or "The Oz," as he's known to every kid on the block. The Oz will never respond to anyone that calls him by his birth name. To do so would make him "break character."

You see, Oswald...er...I mean The Oz is an extra on a famous Sci-Fi TV show. If you read the end credits as they race past your screen, you'll see his name right there, clumped along with all the others, as alien technician #47. So what if he's usually in the distance and lost in the background of a scene. He's on T-V and will make sure that no one ever forgets that - or that fact that he's a card-carrying member of SAG thanks to his immortal delivery of the line "Look out! It's the Thetelons!" He's got all the cocky attitude of a Hollywood star and views the good people of Pookie Dookie Street as "common folk." The Oz runs the local comic shop and lives in the apartment overhead with his "roommate" - code name for mother. She's the only one who can get away with calling him Oswald, much to his SAG-card-carrying dismay, especially when she does so in front of Fanboy and Chum Chum. Fanboy and Chum Chum consider him to be the all-knowing guru of everything Sci-Fi, fantasy, video game or things that require dice with more than six sides. As their very own Yoda, Fanboy and Chum Chum constantly seek out his expertise, and The Oz is more than happy to dish it out. After all, no one is more interested in what The Oz has to say than The Oz himself.

THE GOOD PEOPLE OF POOKIE DOOKIE STREET

There are many average, and some not-so-average characters on the block, but none will ever outshine our heroes. For the most part, it's just the everyday citizens living their normal lives. Unfortunately for them, they tend to get caught up in the wild ride and mishaps that is the daily life of Fanboy and Chum Chum.

POOKIE DOOKIE STREET THAT'S WHERE !

This is where all the madness takes place! I wanted to create an environment that looks and feels like a real live-action TV show where the world is limited to a handful of specific “sets.” It’s almost as if nothing exists beyond the seven buildings where the series takes place. I want the audience to become familiar with the neighborhood and make it their own.

Now, if I can direct your attention to the building on the left, we have The Evil Scales Fish Taco. This is owned and operated by the one time actor known for his portrayal of the Evil Scale from the long-ago-cancelled Fanman live-action series. Along with his very dedicated son, Kyle, they’re on a mission to rule the world one Evil Scale Fish Taco franchise at a time. The Evil Scale may no longer be totally evil, but his tacos sure are wicked!

Then we have the legendary Super Mart. Home of the Frosty Freezy Freeze and the world-famous Invaders video arcade game, it’s the most happening spot in the neighborhood. Where else would superhero kids hang out other than at a “Super” Mart? You can usually catch Fanboy and Chum Chum drinking their favorite Frosty Freezy Freeze slushy drink or reenacting scenes from their favorite Fanman episode. The local grocery mini-mart, the Super Mart is a hotbed of activity. Everyone on the block usually stops by, along with the occasional out-of-towner.

Following that, we have Ninja's Japanese Take-out. This place is known for its awesome sushi and its ninja deliverymen, all of whom were at one time real ninjas. Then the bottom fell out of the ninja market, and, well, work is work.

Sandwiched between the streets is Ward Adam's elementary school. This fine educational establishment molds the bright minds of the future, like our heroes Fanboy and Chum Chum. So maybe "fine educational establishment" is a bit of an exaggeration.

Over on your right hand side, we have the brownstone that houses our heroes and a few neighbors. Atop this building rests The Fanlair, an old, empty water tower that the boys have converted into their "secret" base. It's the place where they can kick off their sneakers and hang up their capes - except that Fanboy never takes his off. The lair is full of Fanman paraphernalia, a blow-up plastic couch in front of a Fanman TV set, homemade gadgets and gizmos, like actual stink bombs (Yikes!), boomerang sneaker shoes and a 100-megawatt flashlight to make diversionary shadow puppets. Yes! Fanboy and Chum Chum are well-prepared and ready for action! Oh wait! Did I forget to mention their 12-foot-tall Frosty Ice Monster pet? We'll get to him in a bit.

Of course, no neighborhood would be complete without an awesome comic book shop. Oz Comix is where the ever-so-popular neighborhood celebrity "The OZ" works (and lives along with his mom in the apartment above the store). Oz Comix is a modern-day Hall of Knowledge housing every single comic ever created along with the heavily guarded Fanman #1 in pristine mint condition, hermetically sealed in double-thick Mylar bags. Wow! I think I just peed a little.

Last, but certainly not least, we have the brownstone that houses The Evil Scale's family.

They're probably the wealthiest family on the block and have the nicest building to prove it. The Evil Scale had a custom-made Evil Scale Lair built atop the building and loaded with top-notch technology to help his son with his villainous plans. He's very supportive of Kyle. The Evil Scale Lair sits directly across from the Fanlair. This is command center from which Kyle plots against Fanboy and Chum Chum.

PREMISES.

SILLY PUTTY BUDDIES

Fanboy and Chum Chum discover the amazing “cloning power” of Silly Putty and are in complete awe. They begin to clone every image inside their Fanman comic books, but soon enough, Fanboy is struck by a bolt of inspiration of superheroic proportions! Why clone simple comic artwork when they have the power to clone... themselves! However, things take a turn for the eviliest when the last thing they clone before cloning themselves were the villains from a Fanman comic book! And thus they break the first rule of Silly Putty cloning: never mix good and evil! The villainous images mix with those of the heroic Fanboy and Chum Chum and ZAP! Evil Silly Putty versions of our heroic twosome are brought to life! Fanboy and Chum Chum must battle these rubbery versions of themselves and return them to their former puttness before it's too late!

BRAIN FREEZE!

“No one loves Frosty Freezy Freezes more than me!” And thus began the greatest Frosty Freezy Freeze challenge Pookie Dookie Street -- nay! The world! -- has ever seen! One day while sitting outside the Super Mart, Chum Chum dares to speak those bold words and Fanboy has no choice but to throw down! “I say thee, I loooooooves Frosty Freezy Freezes even more!” Fanboy boasts. But there can be but one supreme lover of the Frosty Freezy Freeze, so Fanboy and Chum Chum issue a challenge: whoever can slurp a super-size Frosty Freezy Freeze to the last slurp first will be declared the ultimate lover of Frosty Freezy Freezes! After Lenny overhears the challenge, he secretly makes Fanboy and Chum Chum two of the freeziest Freezes known to man, hoping to give both kids a major case of brain freeze. But instead of Brain Freeze ala Lenny, the unforeseen super freeze effect endows Fanboy and Chum Chum with freeze breath powers. Cool! What starts off as fun freeze breath tricks like making Fanman ice sculptures and icicle pops quickly spins into a chaotic deep freeze mess as Fanboy and Chum Chum lose control of their freeze breaths and bring a new Ice Age upon Pookie Dookie Street!

MY PET ICE MONSTER

Fanboy and Chum Chum decide to get a pet, and what better pet than the real Ice Monster from the Fanman comic book? The boys go back to the Super Mart and revive Berry the Mighty Ice Monster -- and once again with no legs. The problem is, they didn't think of how to get him from the Super Mart to the Fan Lair with no one being the wiser. Let's face it, the people of Pookie Dookie Street would not be too keen about a real Ice Monster living on their street -- even one with no legs. Oh! And did I mention it all happens on the hottest day of the summer? Nice one, Fanboy. Armed with a Radio Flyer and some disguises for Berry, the guys desperately deal with this diva Ice Monster, who wants to be seen and feared by all as they hide, squeeze, lose, find, shove in the back of an ice cream truck, crush into an ice box, and slightly melt to get him back to the Lair in some sort of icy piece possibly resembling his original appearance. Uh...more or less.

THE LOST EPISODE

The news is out! “Fanman: The Lost Episode” has been found (It had been sitting under Fanman's sofa cushions for the last 20 years)! Of course, Fanboy's head nearly explodes when he learns the only print of the never-before-seen episode has been bought by The OZ. On the fateful day of the precious item's arrival, trusting no one else -- for who else could be fan enough -- The OZ asks Fanboy and Chum Chum to accept delivery from the mailman while he's out running errands. In return for guarding the prized package with their very lives, The OZ generously offers to let them smell the box. When the Lost Episode arrives, the boys can't restrain themselves! They try to sneak a peek and end up erasing it instead. YIKES! So with some quick thinking, a video camera, and their “pet” Berry “The Ice Monster,” the boys record their own version of the lost Fanman episode. Come on! No one will ever notice the difference.

SOMETHING FISHY THIS WAY COMES

From their Fan Lair high atop Pookie Dookie Street, Fanboy and Chum Chum stand ever-vigilant as guardians of their beloved neighborhood. But this day's lookout duty brings an unforeseen surprise as Fanboy and Chum Chum notice a new family moving into the brownstone across the street. The two kids are excited to learn the family has a boy about their age! Kyle is a fragile, nerdy, thin-built asthmatic kid that squeals when he breathes. It turns out that he's a real likable guy and a bit of a Fanman fan himself. The kids hit it off amazingly well and soon a new threesome of heroes is born. BUT WAIT! What dramatic turn will soon shatter Fanboy's world to the very core!? It seems there's something very...familiar...about Kyle's dad. Perhaps, too familiar. It drives Fanboy crazy as he tries to remember from where he “knows” Kyle's dad. Then “POW!” he realizes Kyle's dad was the actor who played “The Evil Scale,” Fanman's arch-nemesis on the 1980s live-action TV show! Of course, Kyle's dad denies all of Fanboy's accusations, which only makes Fanboy more determined as he and Chum Chum annoyingly poke and prod to uncover the “truth.” Could it be that The Evil Scale himself is Fanboy's new neighbor?! And what will become of Kyle their new best friend? Stay tuned for “Something Fishy This Way Comes!”

RUN MONKEY RUN

What seems like another day on Pookie Dookie Street turns out to be anything but when two apes escape from a Zoo delivery truck. Being apes they naturally rise to highest point on Pookie Dookie Street – which just so happens to be home to the Fan Lair! When inside they come across a pair of spare Fanboy and Chum Chum outfits and squeeze into the ridiculously small Spandex outfits. What would seem completely obvious to everyone that these are apes in costumes doesn't even phase Fanboy and Chum Chum as they continue there everyday lives not knowing that they are each hanging out with ape versions of there counterparts.

OVERLORD OF THE 4th FLOOR DIMENSION

After watching an episode of Fanman where the elevator acts as a doorway to a different dimension, Fanboy and Chum Chum are certain that the elevator in their building must have the same function...if they could only figure out how to activate its trans-dimensional abilities. The solution is simple: they're going to push every floor button in the elevator in every combination possible until they hit the right one that opens the dimensional doorway. So, after trying 10,378 different combinations and tying up the elevator all day, Fanboy and Chum Chum's antics cause a brief power outage in the elevator. When the lights come back on, the two kids are sure they've activated the dimensional door! In their minds, each floor is now a new and different dimension! Who cares if it looks exactly the same, alternate dimensions are tricky that way. As Fanboy and Chum Chum explore each dimension (floor) in their building, they come across a neighbor on the 4th floor who's trying to get to a Star Trek type convention in his alien outfit and is especially irritated by their antics. But this is no ordinary crabby neighbor in the minds of Fanboy and Chum Chum! No! He's the evil overlord from the 4th floor dimension who intends to crush Pookie Dookie Street beneath his evil overlord heel! Fanboy and Chum Chum do all they can to prevent the neighbor from leaving the building; too bad the poor guy is just trying to go to the convention!

PART-TIME VILLAIN

While "studying" another amazing episode of "Fanman," Fanboy sees a commercial for a new Fanman wrist communicator toy. It'd be the perfect gift for Chum Chum's birthday! But by all his fanness, Fanboy hasn't got a penny to his name -- he's blown all his money on a super-super-sized Frosty Freezy Freeze! After a quick assessment of possible jobs around the neighborhood, Fanboy realizes his only option is a part-time job delivering tacos for "The Evil Scale Fish Taco" restaurant. That's all fine and good, but the restaurant is owned by his arch-nemesis and neighbor, The Evil Scale! Noooooooo! Fanboy must sacrifice everything he holds true and dear and don the fishy costume of his enemy – all for the sake of friendship. Fanboy does all he can to keep his shameful secret from Chum Chum, but when Chum Chum spots the "new" Evil Scale employee making a taco delivery, he assumes him to be a new agent of the empire of evil. The two kids battle it out, Chum Chum never realizing he's fighting his best friend, who has donned the mask of the enemy to buy him a cool toy. Is that drama, or what?!
